Enormous crowds of people lined the streets, shoutning their trust in the triumph of the plan of campaign and the politics of General Martinez Campos.

An important meeting was held here to-day in support of Spanish rule in Cuba. Speeches were made by a number of prominet Conservatives. Autonomists, and Reformists, all of whom declared that Cuba's destiny could be achieved only under the flag of Spain.

Senator Santos Guzman declared that the Conservatives gave the full adhesion of the party to the Government.

The meeting of the several political parties proved that Cuba equality with Spain was willing to make sacrifices to

A Spanish column has dispersed two parties of rebels at Rivial.

Advices from Sagua are to the effect that Government troops have had an engagement with and defeated a force of 1,000 rebels, commanded by Gorlina, at Viana Calabasara. The insurgents' loss was Il killed and many wounded.

An attack was made on the insurgent camp at Altagracia, and the rebeis retreted after a slight resistance.

General Pando, in command of the military in the Department of the East, reports from Santiasco de Cuba that the engagements of General Cannela and Colonel Paguero, at Palmarito and Tontino, prove to have been of importance.

It was a victory for their columns. The rebei dead number seventy and the wounded 20s. General Martinez Campos has recommended that General Cannello be decorated with the military cross of San Fernando for his distinguished bravery at the places named.

Following the several engagements named, a number of deserters surrendered and claimed amnesty. The rebel camps are full of wounded. As they constantly shift their quarters, transporting the wounded is a matter of great labor to the men and of great pain to the wounded.

While many rumors were circulated of the capture of Maximo Gomez, no one could give any definite information. He was reported to be in Clenfusoes Palmeand on the same day he was reported to be retreating.

The presentation of an armed steam cutter by the Spanish citizens of New York to the Government of Spain has given great satisfaction here. She is American built, length ninety-nine feet on the water line, eighty-nine feet; breadth, seventeen feet; draft, seven feet; coal capacity, twelve to fifteen toms; consumption, one-half to two tons age devisumption, one-half to two tons per day; ordinary speed, eleven to twelve miles; under forced draft, fourteen miles. check on the motorman-twelve or thir-teen miles an hour.

Some interesting calculations are made

With cars drawn by mechanical power brake is equivalent to braking ten horse cars. This is neither fair to the g.lpman nor to the public.

With the great distance run by the car in a second it is evident that the application of the brakes, in an emergency stop at least, should be as nearly instantaneous

The speed of trolley and cable cars is greater than that of horse cars. The usual speed of a horse car is six miles an hour; of a cable car, under favorable circumstances, eight or nine miles an hour; of a trolley car—where there is no check on the motorman—twolve or this.

They Relapsed into Barbarism.

Some interesting calculations are made in a recent issue of the Street Railway Journal, showing the amount of brake force which has to be exerted in order to stop a street car of each kind.

Thus, a horse car weighing, with its passengers, 10,000 pounds, and traveiling at a speed of six miles an hour, requires work to stop it equal to the raising of six tons one foot high.

An electric car traveiling at a rate of twenty miles an hour and weighing 20,000 pounds, with its passengers, requires a force to be exerted equal to the raising of 120 tons one foot high. In other words, while the weight of the cars has been doubled, the brake power necessary to stop them has had to be increased much more than double.

With the old-fashioned hand brake on with the old-fashioned hand brake on a horse car going at average speed about one second elapsed before the brake shoe touched the wheel. During the time requird for taking up the slack of the brake, the car would have gone ten feet. With a new brake shoe or when the slack happens to be very small, the time occupied in bringing the brake shoe in contact with the wheel may be a little less than a second.

The girls were ragged and dirty, and it was not possible to remain near them for more than ten minutes. When shown the pictures and asked whether they remembered the places, they said "Yes," but without showing the least interest except in the expected backsheesh. This they got, with the result that they repeated their visit soon after.—London Daily News.
